Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 20 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Heavy rain with strong winds overnight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Torrential rain arriving from the west this evening before clearing overnight to leave behind showery conditions with clear spells. Winds remain strong, with the risk of coastal gales. Feeling colder with a chance of frost for prone spots. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Thursday:
Cold, plenty of sunny spells alongside some blustery showers. Both showers and strong winds gradually easing later with showers becoming confined to the far southwest. Risk of frost developing overnight. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Wintry scattered showers with sunny intervals on Friday. Further showers on Saturday with persistent rain further south. Heavier rain outbreaks on Sunday. Cold throughout with risk of morning frosts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.